

Alfresco Theatre

TO AUG 19 Every summer, for more than three-quarters of a century, Theatre Under the Stars (page 76) has been filling Malkin Bowl with beloved musicals. This year, more than 45,000 guests of all ages are expected to watch (and perhaps even sing along with) Mary Poppins, based on one of the most popular Disney movies of all time. This family favourite is performed on alternating nights with The Drowsy Chaperone, a charming Jazz Age parody. It's outdoor theatre at its finest.—Sheri Radford

Best of Brunch

TO SEP 3 Need confirmation that the world looks better through rosé-coloured glasses? Just ask the folks at Market by Jean-Georges (page 96). All summer long, the downtown restaurant is elevating weekend brunch to a whole new level, pairing classic brunch dishes with rosé wines, cocktails and even popsicles. And the short-rib hash (pictured), French toast, eggs benny and avocado toast taste even better against the mellow backdrop of live music.—Sheri Radford

Wait for It

AUG 17 Every fan of Tom Petty and the Heartbreakers (page 75) knows the waiting is the hardest part. It's been three long years since the heartland rockers last raised the roof of Rogers Arena, but the drought is finally over. The band's 40th-anniversary tour is making a stop in Vancouver, and fans can sing along to hits such as "Breakdown" and "Learning to Fly." Rock on.—Sheri Radford
