The Freedom talisman from Vancouver's own Pyrrha was handcrafted from 14K gold. Blue Ruby (page 29) carries a wide selection of Pyrrha jewellery, or shop the entire collection at www.pyrrha.com.

Indigo (page 24) carries a whole menagerie of charming mugs, plates and pillows adorned with a hipster fox, bear, moose or owl.

Woven from soft merino wool, the Running Wolf Blanket from Filson (page 23) was inspired by native designs of the Pacific Northwest.

A lapel pin from Catfé (page 83), Vancouver's first cat cafe, shows solidarity with your fiercest feline friends.

For Animal Lovers

Could this tree ornament of a moose playing ice hockey possibly be any more Canadian? (Maybe if it came with a side of poutine.) At Indigo (page 24).

Each "otterly" adorable Aquadopt Kit from the Vancouver Aquarium (page 64) contains a plush sea otter, certificate of adoption, fact booklet and collector card. Profits help fund the aquarium's conservation, research and education programs.

Ping pong players show panache with leather-and-walnut table tennis paddles from Tiffany & Co. (page 30).

Hudson's Bay (page 27) reveals its true stripes by donating the proceeds from Hudson—this year's limited-edition Charity Bear—to Headfirst, which supports mental health initiatives across Canada.

Tiny tots can catch some Zs in PJs from Indigo (page 24) decorated with "Hockey Night in the Wild."

Say good night to the city's most scenic spots, from Stanley Park to the Capilano Suspension Bridge, with Night-Night Vancouver by Katherine Sully. At local bookstores (page 24).

For Cool Kids

A plaid stocking from Indigo (page 24) is the perfect way to commemorate a newborn's first cool yule.

Made from organic cotton by Vancouver company Redfish Kids (page 25), the Good Fortune Onesie Mariner amps up the cuteness quotient.

Vancouver's own Native Shoes (page 28) makes the coolest kicks for the coolest kids.

A candy bento box from Sugarfina satisfies any sweet tooth. At Nordstrom (page 27).

Unbearably cheesy puns are the inevitable accompaniment to this durable wooden cheeseboard and wood-handled cheese knife from Indigo (page 24).

Handcrafted chocolates from Thomas Haas (page 81) please the pickiest of palates.

We'll drink to this: Cheers to Canada! Whisky Stones keep drinks cold without watering them down or changing their flavour. At Indigo (page 24).

This troll-shaped citrus reamer from True Zoo has removable silicone "hair," to make cleaning easy-peasy-lemon-squeezy. At Hudson's Bay (page 27).

For Foodies

Writer/bartender Chad Parkhill takes readers on a spirited globetrotting tour in Around the World in 80 Cocktails. At local bookstores (page 24).

Baby, it's cold outside, but Christmas Jewel Tea from TWG Tea (page 78) can warm up even a cold-hearted Grinch with its blend of green teas, accented by spices, sweet orange and golden pearls of tea.

Lightweight and breathable, the Atom LT Hoody from local brand Arc'teryx (page 31) feels as warm and cozy as a sleeping bag but can be packed down to almost nothing and stored inside its own pocket.

Tedious travel time can often be improved with a tippie or two, hence the Carry On Cocktail Kit. All that's missing is the actual liquor. At Indigo (page 24) and Starbucks (page 78).

For Globetrotters

Unlike their liquid counterparts, Mouthwash Tabs from Lush (page 54) pose zero risk of spilling sticky, minty fluids all over the insides of a suitcase or purse.

A sleep mask from Indigo (page 24) is ideal for blocking out the harsh light of day on planes, trains and automobiles.

Those with itchy feet and incurable wanderlust need a dose of Lonely Planet's Best in Travel 2018, which describes next year's must-see countries, regions and cities. At local bookstores (page 24).

What do you get when a popular Vancouver brand teams up with North America's oldest company? A backpack that pairs the inimitable style of Herschel Supply Co. with the iconic stripes of Hudson's Bay (page 27).

The Let's Roam Road Trip Diffuser Kit from Vancouver company Saje (page 54) brings the sweet smell of aromatherapy to your car, or anywhere with a USB outlet.

This cute and colourful case from Kikkerland is made for storing contact lenses. At Kimprints (page 28).

No woman can resist the scintillating sparkle of a diamond necklace from Lao Feng Xiang (page 29).

Chris Collacott shot this stunning photo of Vancouver, which was then transferred onto fabric made entirely from recycled plastic bottles. The end result is a limited-edition, eco-friendly scarf. Buy online at www.infocuscanada.ca.

Anyone would appreciate the timely gift of a new Seamaster Aqua Terra watch from Omega (page 29).

For the Style Savvy

A packable puffer vest from Hudson's Bay (page 27) is metallic chic on the outside, classic HBC stripes on the inside.

Warm mittens from Indigo (page 24) are intended for those on both of Santa's lists.

Vancouver company MyPackage makes great ginch for guys, to protect the package. At MEC (page 31).

Look good, feel good: handcrafted bracelets from Blue Ruby (page 29) benefit the Cause We Care Foundation, which helps mothers and children living in poverty.
