Voices in the Park

Imagine an all-day outdoor concert featuring Vancouver's own Sarah McLachlan and Bryan Adams, along with Stevie Nicks, Jann Arden, Hedley, The Boom Booms and The Vancouver Men's Chorus. Now throw in a special appearance by former U.S. president Bill Clinton. If you think that sounds like the event of the season, you're right. Don't miss the first-ever Voices in the Park (page 63), taking place Sep. 15 at the Brockton Fields in Stanley Park. The whole thing is raising funds for the Sarah McLachlan School of Music, which offers free music programs to at-risk youth in Vancouver, so you can feel virtuous about how much fun you're having.

BLIND DATE

Gents with stage fright might want to sit in the very back row for this one: when Mimi's blind date stands her up, the fearless Parisian temptress selects a man from the audience to be her date instead. What ensues is 90 minutes of heart-warming improvisation and spontaneous clowning, all wrapped up in a social experiment. Catch the hilarity at the Cultch (Sep. 18 to Oct. 7; page 66).
