What makes West Coasters tick? Find out through this eclectic selection of recent releases, available at local bookstores (page 31).—Sheri Radford

A Taste of Haida Gwaii: Food Gathering and Feasting at the Edge of the World by Susan Musgrave (Whitecap Books; $34.95): One of Canada's most celebrated poets has created her first cookbook, packed full of lyrical prose, stunning colour photographs, and seasonal recipes using fresh West Coast ingredients.

Raincoast Chronicles 23 edited by Peter A. Robson (Harbour Publishing; $24.95): It's not a journal. It's not a book. So what is it, exactly? Over the past four decades, the Raincoast Chronicles series has brought to life the assortment of oddball characters and bizarre events that give Canada's West Coast its unique flavour.

Remake: Master Works of Art Reimagined by Jeff Hamada (Chronicle Books; $33.95): Imagine iconic works of art given a do-over by modern-day artists. That's the premise behind this crowd-sourced collection, curated by the Vancouverite who founded the art blog Booooooom (www.booooooom.com).

Those Girls by Chevy Stevens (St. Martin's Press; $21.99): In her fifth novel, the New York Times best-selling author (and Vancouver Island resident) weaves another page-turner of a tale set in small-town British Columbia, this time about three sisters on the run who are forced to confront their past—and, perhaps, exact revenge.
